OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27, 1865. Major General Diz, New York .

J. Wilkes Booth and Harrold were chased from the swamp in St. Mary's county, Md., pursued yesterday morning to Garrett's farm, near Port Royal, on the Rappahannock, by Col. Baker's force.

The barn in which they took refuge was Booth in making his escape was shot through the head and killed, lingering about three hours, and Harrold taken alive. Booth's body and Harrold are now here.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

FURL HER PARTICULARS.

The thrilling into ligence of the capture and ignominious death of the assassin Booth was received with profound satisfaction here, the only shade of alloy being in the fact that the villain met any end less disgraceful than in having his neck stretched.

To Col. L. C. Baker, special detective of the War Department, and his admirably trained detective force, and to the New York cavalry, the active participators in the seizures, the country owes a debt of gratitude for this timely

It seems that a detachment of the 16th New York cavalry, numbering about twenty-five men, which was dispatched from this city on Monday under the direction of Colonel L. C. Baker, special detective of the War Department, in command of Lieut. Dogherty, accempanied by some of Col. Baker's officers, captured and killed Booth and captured Herold one of his accomplices alive.

The cavalry, after leaving here, landed at Belle Plain in the night, and immediately started out in pursuit of Booth and Herold, having previously ascertained from a colored man that they had crossed the river into Virginia at Swan Point, in a small canoe, hired by Beoth from a man for $300.

Proceeding on towards Bowling Green, some three miles from Port Royal, Lieut. Dogherty. who was in command of the cavalry, discovered that Booth and Herold were secreted in a large barn, owned by a man named Garrett, and were well armed. The cavalry then surrounded the barn and summoned Booth and his accomplice to surrender. Herold was inclined at first to accede to the request, but Booth accused him of cow. ardice, then they both peremptorily [refused to surrender and made preparations to defend In order to take the conspirators alive, the barn was fired, and the flames getting too hot for herold he approached the door of the barn and signified his willingness to be taken prisoner. Herold then came out of the barn and gave himself up, and was securely handcuffed. Booth maintained a defiant attitude, refusing to surrender, and in braggadocia style challenged his pursuers to fight him by turns singly. As the roof of the barn was about falling in, and Boeth manifested a disposition to Pake a bolt, he was shot by Sergeant Boston Corbett, of the 16th New York, the ball taking effect in the neck, from the effects of which he died in about three hours.

Booth, before breathing his last, was asked if he had anything to say, when he replied, "Tell my mother that I died for my coun-

Herold and the body of Booth was brought into Belle Plain at eight o'clock last night, and reached the Navy Yard here at one o'clock this morning, on board of the steamer John S. Ides, Capt. Henry Wilson.

The statement heretofore published that Booth had injured one of his legs by the falling of his horse, has proven to be correct After he was shot it was discovered that one of his legs was badly injured, and that he was compelled to wear an old shoe, and use crutches, which he had with him in the barn, Booth was shot about 4 o'clock in the morning, and died about 7 o'clock.

Booth had upon his person some bills of exchange, but only $175 in Treasury notes.

It appears that Booth and Herold left Washington together on the night of the murder of President Lincoln, and passed through Leonardtown, Md., concealing themselves in the vicinity until an opportunity was afforded them to cross the river at Swan Point, which they did as above stated.

The man who hired Booth and his accomplice the boat in which he crossed the river made his escape."

Herold has been lodged in a secure place. Bowling Green, near which place Booth was killed, is a post village, the capital of Caroline county, Va., on the road from Richmond +-Fredericksburg, 45 miles north of the former, and is situated in a fartile and healthy region. It contains ? Paurches, 3 stores, 2 mills, and about 300 'nhabitants.

Por Royal is a post village in Uaroline county, Va., on the right bank of the Rappahannock river, twenty-two miles below Fredericksburg. It has a population of six hundred, and there is a good steamboat landing near the place.

MARKRITER'S .- A picture by Sontag, a scene near Wheeling; one by Lanman, a view on the Upper Mississippi; and one by Meyer, of Dresden, entitled "Past and Future," attract much attention at Markriter's just now. Another "Little Chick" picture affords pleasure also to visitors at Markriter's.

LOST AND FOUND. Financial. From New York Commercial, April 26.]

After a protracted interruption, indeed al-most suspension, of business, connected with the national bereavement, the markets open with a general feeling of vigor. The tone of business is buoyant in every department; operations are unchecked by any apprehension of a collapse consequent upon peace, and the general sentiment is to push forward vigorously, not timid about prospective difficulties, but leaving the future to take care of itself. The great abundance of money continues to foster a strong speculative movement in stocks. The plethora of unemployed funds appeared at a period when stocks were extremely low. therefore in a favorable condition for operations for a rise. At the same time the market was largely oversold by a strong "bear" clique, whose necessary purchases to cover their "shorts" have greatly strengthened the upward tendency. The brokers are nearly all on the "bull" side of the market, and appear to think that the rise has not yet reached its climax by far. The expectation of a further advance appears to rest much less upon the real value of stocks than on the prospect that a continued abundance of money will facilitate speculative op-erations. The large earnings of the railroads, however, give considerable strength to the market, and enable speculation to run up prices beyond what would be otherwise pos-

In some quarters there is a very confident expectation that prices will be run up to most extravagant figures. It is argued that the reduction of Government expenditures, consequent upon peace, will still further augment the supply of money, reducing the street rate of interest to four per cent., and that with money so extraordinarily cheap and the roads in a flourishing condition, there will be no difficulty in putting up stocks to the highest prices they realized in 1861. These calculations, however, perhaps do not sufficiently take into account the fact there remains probably $400,000,000 more of Seventhirty notes to be put out, and that large amounts of money will naturally go into those securities in preference to being loaned at four per cent. on the street; nor does it appear to be sufficiently remembered that there is a possi. bility of a large amount of Five-twenty bonds being returned from Europe, an occurrence which would act as a diversion of the current of speculation from railroad shares.

The Army of the Petomac.

The Petersburg correspondent of the Philaadelphia Inquirer writes April 20th: The Army of the Potomac is still quartered in the immediate vicinity of Burkesville. The 2d corps are encamped close by the town, and the 6th corps are located very near them. The 9th corps still hold the line of railroad between Petersburg and Burkesville, the 5th corps stretch from Burkesville towards Lynchburg, and the 24th corps occupy the latter town and vicinity. Sheridan's cavalry have, within a few hours, all entered around Petersburg, and Gen. Sneridan, in prepria persona, remains in the town.

It is thought that no change will take place in the position of the army at present. Furloughs for fitteen days are being granted to officers in considerable numbers, which would not be the case if any movement except perhaps a retrograde one was centemplated. A platform is deing erected at Burkesville Station about one mile from the town, for the reception of stores, &c , that come from City Point by rail, consigned to the 2d corps. Put this and that tegether and the most natural deduction is that the army will remain in statu quo for some

About fifty pieces of artillery, which were buried by the rebels in the fields and along the roads; during their late famous retreat, have been unearthed by our men and brought safely in Burkesville. These pieces were discovered without much difficulty, from the simple fact that our scouts helped the unsuspecting rebels to bury them. During the retreat Sheridan's scouts mixed freely and constantly with the rebels, and accurately marked the places of concesiment of cannon, caiseons and other munitions of war too troublesome to ccompany eet-looted chivalry. The heavily laden wagon trains captured by Sheridan's "Raiders" lately, were found, on examination, to contain large quantities of goods of all descriptions captured by the Rebels at Chambersburg and other towns in the Unmberland Valley during the last raid in that direction. Many of the boxes had never been unpacked, the work being reserved for the sabres of our cavalry, and per consequence many of Sheridan's Rough Riders now sport boots, shoes, coats, at, brought by the Rebels, for the use of our men, all the way from the Cam-from that city In the first place, guards were placed along the entire route from the treasury to the depot, with strict orders to allow no wagon to deviate frem the direct road between them. I am not intending to give statistical information as to the amount of specie carried off, and when I say that the number of kegs of gold is stated to have been thirty-four, I neither wouch for the number nor hint as to the amount contained in each, my purpose is rather to show the jealous care with which it was guarded.

One keg only was placed in each wagon, and a guard of four men being detailed to each, armed with a musket and revolver, marched by its side. There were intended to guard against the populace and the driver. A confidential clerk of the Treasury Department mounted by the side of each driver, and was intended to keep watch over him and the wagon guard and the street guard, before mentioned, effectually prevented all of these from collecting together to teke wagon and specie to some other place than the Danville Depot. Trenholm himself staid at the Treasury until the last keg was sent off, and followed it on foot. At the depot the specie was loaded into two cars, and four of the principal officers of the Department were detailed to each bar, and rode with the tressure. Equal care, for some reason, was not taken with Confederate bonds, notes, &c., these latter being scattered loosely all over the city. Trenhoim probably thought his prospect for starting a paper mill somewhat dim, and his currency being nothing but waste paper wisely left it behind.

THE LAST OF BOOTH. ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

VERY INTERESTING PARTICULARS. STATEMENTS OF THE PARTIES WHERE BOOTH LODGED.

HE IS TAKEN THERE AS A WOUNDED MARYLAND SOLDIER.

HE PREFENDS GREAT HORROR OF THE ASSASSINATION.

DESCRIPTION OF HIS BODY.

THE SHOT THAT KILLS HIM ENTERS HIS HEAD VERY NEAR THE PLACE WHERE MR. LINCOLN WAS SHOT:

Booth and Herold reached Garrett's some days ago, Booth walking on crutches. A party of four or five accompanied them, who spoke of Booth as a wounded Marylander. on his way home, and that they wished to leave him there a short time, and would take him away by the 26th, (yesterday). Booth limped somewhat and walked on crutches about the place, complaining of his ancle. He and Herold regularly took their meals at the house, and both kept up appearances well. One day at the dinner table the conversation turned on the assassination of the President when Booth denounced the assassination in the severest terms, saying that there was no punishment severe enough for the perpetrator. At another time some one said in Booth's presence that rewards amounting to $200,000 had been effered for Booth, and that he would like to catch him, when Booth replied, "Yes, it would be a good haul, but the amount would doubtless soon be increased to $500,000." The two Garretts who lived on the place allege that they had no idea that these parties (Booth and Herold) were any other than what their friends represented themselves-paroled Confederate soldiers on their way home. They also say that when the cavalry appeared in that neighborhood, and they heard that they were looking for the assassins, that they sent word to them that these two men were on the place. In other words, they assert that they are entirely innocent of giving the assassins any aid and comfort, knowing them to be such.

The Ida (tug boat) reached here about two e'clock last night with Herold and the two young men above referred to, as well as the body of Booth. Herold was immediately placed in a safe place. He thus far, it is stated. has manifested no disposition to speak of the affair, but as he was known as a very talkative young man, he may soon resume the use Booth and Herold were dressed in Confederate grey-new uniforms. Herold was otherwise not disguised much. Booth's monstache had been cut off apparently with scissors, and his beard allowed to grow, changing his appearance considerably. His hair had been cut somewhat shorter than he usually wore it Booth's body, which we have above described, was at once laid out on a bench and a guard placed over it. The lips of the corpse are tightly compressed, and the blood has settled in the lower part of the face and neck Otherwise the face is pale and wears a wild haggard look, indicating exposure to the elements and a rough time generally in his skulking flight.

His hair is disarranged and dirty, and apparently had not been combed since he took his flight. The head and breast is alone exposed to view, the lower portion of the body, including the hands and feet, being covered with a tarpaulin thrown over it. The shot which terminated his accursed life entered on the left side at the back of the neck.

a point, curiously enough, not far distant from that in which his victim, our lamented President, was shot. No orders have yet been given as to what disposition will be made of the Large numbers of persons have been seeking admission to the Navy Yard to-day, to get a sight of the body, and to hear the particulars, but none excepting the workmen, the officers of the yard, and those holding orders from the Department, are allowed to enter.

A Spencer carbine, which Booth had with him in the barn, at the time he was shot by Sergeant Corbett, and a large knife, with blood on it, supposed to be the one which Booth cut Major Rathbone with in the theater box on the night of the murder of President Lincoln, and which was found on Booth's body, has been brought to the city. The carbine and knife are now in the possession of Col. Baker at his

The bills of exchange, which are for a considerable amount, found on Booth's person, were drawn on banks in Canada in October last. About that time Booth was known to have been in Canada.

It is now thought that Booth's leg was fractured in jumping from the box in Ford's Theatre upon the stage, and not by the falling of his horse while endeavoring to make his escape, as was at first supposed.

LATER. ADDITIONAL DETAILS.

The detachment of the 16th New York cay airy, under Lieut. Dougherty, numbering 29 men, and accompanied by two of Col. Baker's detective force, which went down the river on Monday, obtained the first news of Booth at Port Royal, Tuesday evening, from an old man, who stated that four men, in company with a rebel captain, had crossed the Rappahannock a short time previous, going in the direction of Bowling Green, and added that the captain would probably be found at that place, as he was courting a young lady there.

Pushing on to Bowling Green, the Captain was found at the hotel, and taken into custody From him it was ascertained that Booth and Herold were at the house of John and William Garrett, three miles back towards Port Reyal, and about a quarter of a mile from the road passed over by the cavalry. In the meantime it appears that Booth and Herold had applied to Garrett for horses to ride to Louisa Court House, but the latter fearing the horses would not be returned, refused to hire them, not withstanding the large sums offered.

The recriminations of Booth and Herold, each charging the other with the responsibility of their difficulties, had also aroused the suspicions of the Garrett brothers, who urged Booth and Herold to leave lest they (Garretts) should get into trouble with our cavalry. This Booth refused to do without a horse, and the two men retired to the barn, which, after they had entered, Garrett locked, remaining on guard himself in a neighboring corn crib, as he alices, to prevent their horses from being taken and ridden off in the night by Booth and

Upon the approach of our cavairy from Bowling Green about three o'clock Wednesday morning, the Garretts came out of the corn crib to meet them, ann in answer to their inquiries directed them to the barn.

Booth was at once summoned to surrender, but refused. Herold expressed a willingness to give himself up, but was overruled by Booth for some time, finally, however, surrendering, leaving Booth in the barn. The latter, assuming a defiant air, called out to know the commanding officer, and proposed to him that the men should be drawn up at fifty yards distance, when he would come out and fight After the barn had been burning three quarters of an hour, and the roof was about to fall in, Booth, who had been standing with a revolver in one hand and a carbine resting on the floor, made a demonstration as if to break through the guard and escape. To prevent this, Sergeant Corbett fired, intending to hit Booth in the shoulder, so as to cripple him, the ball, however, striking a little too high. entering the neck, and resulting fatally, as be-Booth had in his possession the short heavy bowie knife with which he struck Major Rathburn, a Spencer carbine, a seven shooter, of Massachusetts manufacture, three revolvers and a pocket pistol. He wore in addition to his suit of gray, an ordinary cloth cap, a heavy high topped cavalry boot on his right foot with the top turned down, and a Government shoe on his left toot. No clue could be obtained to the other two men, and taking the two Garretts into custody, the command immediately set out for Wash. ington, after releasing the captain.

Lieut. Dougherty, who commanded the quadron, entered the service with the 71st New York militia, which, it will be remembered, was quartered in the Navy Yard here for some time. After participating in the first hattle of Bull Run, he joined the Berdan Sharpshooters, and afterwards entered the 16th New York cavalry, in which regiment he at different times distinguished himself, particularly at Culpeper last fall, where, with a handful of men, he cut his way through Kershaw's rebel brigade.

Sergeant Corbett, who shot Booth, was baptized in Boston about seven years ago, at which time he assumed the name of Boston Corbett. Week ago last Sunday he participated in the religious services at McKendree Chapel, petitioning in his prayer for the early punishment of the assassin of President Lincoln. Today he has been greatly lionized, and on the street was repeatedly surrounded by citizens. who occasionally manifested their appreciation by lond cheers.

The two Garretts are dressed in rebel grey having belonged to Lee's army, and just returned home on parole. They profess to have been entirely ignorant of the character of Booth and Herold, and manifest great uneasiness concerning their connection with the affair.

Booth and Herold made a narrow escape from being captured on this side of the Potomac. Marshal Murray and a posse of New York detectives tracked them to within a short distance of Swan Point, but the Marshal being unacquainted with the country, and without a guide during the darkness of the night, took the wrong road, and before he could regain the trail, Booth and Herold succeeded in crossing the river to the Virginia shore.

The report that Boeth attempted to shoot himself while in the barn is incorrect. He, however, in his parley with his besiegers indicated that he would not be taken alive. His manner throughout was that of hardened desperation, knowing that his doom was sealed. and preferring to meet it there in that shape to the more ignominious death awaiting him if captured. He appeared to pay little attention to the fire raging about him until the roof began to fall in, when he made a movement indicating a purpose to make the desperate aftempt to cut his way out, and perhaps really hoped to succeed amid the smoke and confusion. It was this movement on his part that seems to have caused Corbett to fire the fatal shot. Herold, before leaving the barn laid down his pistol, which was immediately picked up by Booth, who had it in his hand at the time he Boston Corbett, who killed Booth, is said to be a man of deep religious seeling, who has at prayer meetings lately prayed fervently that the assassin of the late President might be brought to justice. It is said also that in pull. ing the trigger upon Booth he sent up an audible petition for the soul of the criminal. The pistol used by Corbett was the regular large. sized cavalry pistol. He was offered $1,000 this morning for the pistol with its five undischarged loads. This afternoon Surgeon General Barnes.

with an assistant, held an autopsy on the body of Booth. It now appears that Booth and Herold had on clothes which were originally some other color and dusty presented that appearance.

SPEEDY RETRIBUTION.

The nation can once more breathe freely. Assassination is made a thing too ignominious and sure of punishment to ever prowoke repetition in this free country.

The terrible energy and vigilance with which the Government has pursued the assassin gang is shown in the manner in which the plot has been followed in all its ramifications, and the principal conspirators seized in the very moment of their exultation over what they deemed the successful accomplishment of a carefully, shrewdly, devilishly devised

Had the public confidence in the security of our institutions faltered for one moment. which it did not-it must now be reassured in seeing the machine of State working so steadi. ly on, and the plotters against it brought to such stern and instantaneous retribution.
